THE PERFECT PARTNER

How to Attract a Mate and Relate

For greater understanding be sure to read this short introduction

On the previous page is your Birth Chart. Please check that the birth details - date, time and place - are correct as given.

This SUccessful RElationship report tells you all about yourself, or someone else, as a potential partner or as an actual partner. It is drawn from the Sign positions of the Sun, Moon, Planets and Ascendant/Descendant at your time of birth or theirs, and is based on the classic astrological law 'Character is Destiny' which says that it is entirely down to who and what you are as an individual that determines what kind of people and events you attract into your life. This law also affirms that the surest way to improve your relationship life is to improve your manner of relating, rather than expecting or forcing others generally, or one person in particular, to do so - something which can have quite the opposite effect. If you have chosen the report for yourself, it will help you to be "perfect" in the sense of being more attractive, eligible or successful in the relationship stakes by showing you how to identify and capitalize on your positive traits and how to minimize or correct any negative ones - for it is these that make or break. For each astrological position there is 'When you are Alone' advice, which has been specifically written to help you if you are either actually alone or alone but still in a relationship. If you have chosen the report for someone else, it will tell you how to know them better and so attract and keep them, how to understand, accept and manage their weaknesses, how to appreciate and make the most of their positive traits, and how to stay in love with, and interested in, one another.

Whilst Reading Your "Perfect Partner" Profile

Please bear in mind that although this relationship report is as accurate and informative as possible, there is no guarantee that every word will apply at this moment in time, or in the past or future.

1/Venus: Your Turn-Ons and Turn-Offs

Relating and relationship are astrologically ruled by Venus because it is a sense of attraction, love, affection, harmony, sharing and fairness that makes relating what it is supposed to be. And first of all it is how you attract and what you are attracted to that actually gets a relationship going, makes one happen. Note that if you are male some of your Venus qualities may be what you see or look for in your mate, actual or intended - but in truth they belong to you!

With your Venus in Libra, you are...

The Charming Lover or The Superficial Lover

Love or Fancy?

Love for you is something that has to be civil, beautiful and harmonious - a classical love that graces your life and the society in which you live, like a piece of music or a work of art. You draw this sense of love from deep levels of your soul, but paradoxically it can distance you from actually feeling love on a personal level that is more than skin-deep. So this can make it hard for you to utterly commit, and can cause you to seduce with, or be seduced by, mere Fancy.

You attract and win over with...

- ...gentle, sophisticated and aesthetic charms that can make the object of your affection feel treated how they've always wanted to be treated.
- ...good manners and social contacts, plus the improved life-style these promise or bring.
- ...being true to some definite standard of relating and social behaviour.

But you can repel with - and should avoid or remedy...

- ...an inability to resist the temptation of using and enjoying your natural appeal by flirting, thus appearing insincere to someone you are really interested in.
- ...a blind adherence to social etiquette and norms so as to mask emotional ineptitude or some dark inner complex.
- ...an intolerance of honest displays of emotion, because you see them as 'bad manners', or rather because they remind you of what you find so hard to express yourself.

You are attracted to and won over by...

- ...beauty, be it of looks or personality, or artistic talent.
- ...someone who is your equal, in terms of complementing you, and possibly, but not necessarily, with respect to social class or status.
- ...harmony and tastefulness, be it in the living room, the kitchen or the bedroom.

But you are repelled and turned off by...

- ...anyone who does not appeal to your refined sense of values and appearance.
- ...anyone who lacks the social graces or at least refuses to learn any (possibly from you).
- ...any kind of aesthetic, moral or cultural wasteland; coarseness.

When you are Alone...

...or dissatisfied, it is because no-one measures up to your high standards. More to the point however, pleasing and graceful though they may be, they do not meet any significant other's emotional needs - or your own for that matter. It is equally possible that you have applied these high social and aesthetic standards to your own personality and found it wanting and unfit for relationship. The barrier you have to get through is a superficial idea of what love and relating actually is. This does not mean that you are shallow and incapable of loving, but that you use surface values like looks and behaviour as your criteria because you are not sure of your own inner worth and lovability. As a reaction to all this, you can sometimes find yourself rejecting social and aesthetic values altogether. But this would be you simply rebelling against them in an attempt to find your own emotional truth, a practice which could eventually lead to success, or, if carried too far, could find you more alone than ever.

2/Mars: Your Effectiveness and Sex-Drive

Hard on the heels of Venus - how you attract and what you are attracted to - comes Mars, the Go-Getter. At the attraction stage nothing further happens unless one person makes a move. Equally, when in relationship it is important that one properly asserts one's individual feelings and desires. In this way we become effective and balance out any Venusian inclination to be too nice and agreeable, something that we can at first enjoy but ultimately can just annoy. At the other extreme though, Mars warns of anger and other potentially destructive emotions. Note that if you are female some of your Mars qualities may be what you see or look for in your mate, actual or intended - but in truth they belong to you!

With your Mars in Sagittarius, you are...

The Ardent Go-Getter or The Unruly Go-Getter

Effectiveness or Anger?

Effectiveness for you is attained and maintained through enthusiastically pursuing whatever or whoever has meaning or passion for you. It is absolutely essential that you have the space, time and freedom to explore your interests and desires, but hopefully, and eventually, wisely rather than just wildly. To a degree, physical exertion will siphon off your prodigious energy. Being or feeling cooped-up or held back by anything or anyone will drive you to mighty and self-justifying Anger.

You excite and win over with...

...a spirited and very confident way of going about things.

...a crusading or progressive energy that encourages and exhorts significant others to enjoy and further themselves.

...a lusty and vigorous sexuality embracing both human virtues and animal passions.

But you drive away with - and should avoid or remedy...

...an overwhelming boisterousness that proves to be a case of more energy than sense.

...a self-righteous, might-is-right attitude that arrogantly assumes that the other person always wants what you want, and should believe what you believe in.

...amoral and bigoted (sexual) behaviour.

You are excited and won over by...

...someone with plenty of energy and who seems to be going somewhere in life.

...adventures, outdoor pursuits, fun and games, and generally horsing around.

...the pageant of life, travelling, exploring and hotly debating far-reaching subjects like history, philosophy, religion, law, etc..

But you are unimpressed or driven away by...

...feeble types and affairs that are going nowhere.

...pedestrian, provincial sorts who just like to play it safe, inevitably forcing you to break away from such confinement.

...life becoming too mundane with no sense of it having any greater significance or higher meaning.

When you are Alone...

...it is most probably because you have run out of road, meaning that either you got to a point where the road of life split and you and your mate went your own ways, or that the road you were on was not going anywhere so your partner left it or you did, or, you have no one in your life simply because your wild desire to roam prohibits any kind of close or lasting relationship. Having said all of this though, you are one of the least likely people to find themselves alone for long. Like a horse that has lost track of its herd, you gallop off and away until you have found a new one and a new mate. You are not one to hang around on your own pondering the why and the wherefore. You see other people as opportunities not to be missed. However, there is another very possible reason for being alone, and that is one day you took one liberty too many and then your mate finally called it a day.

3/Moon: Your Feelings and Inclinations

Underlying what and how you attract and how you act upon this, there are your emotional nature and needs. It is especially important to be aware of these because when we are not they make themselves known unconsciously - which can sometimes mean too late or in the wrong way, leading to upset or break-up - or a non-starter. All this poses the difference between a response and a reaction, between what can damage or repel a relationship, and what can nurture and secure one.

With your Moon in Taurus, you are... The Steady Soul or The Stubborn Soul

Healthy Needs or Bad Habits?

You need to feel physically satisfied, but this may mean that you have a habit of being blind to the other person's psychological or spiritual requirements - or your own for that matter.

You need to feel materially secure, which may have the trade-off of emotional limitations with respect to what kind of partner you have or would attract.

You are inclined to be the bountiful provider, but could also find such a habitual role becoming a burden to you.

You naturally create a feeling of comfort...

...with your aura of earthy stability and emotional steadfastness.

...in a physical, material or sensuous manner, providing your partner or intended with the necessary creature comforts.

...in a very real, substantial way, giving value for value.

But you can antagonize by childishly reacting...

...to making any changes with a great resistance, even when such changes are in aid of establishing security or relieving boredom.

...to emotional and intangible qualities by withholding or overlooking in favour of physical or material ones.

...when you cannot possess the other person as if they were your personal property.

You are unconsciously drawn towards...

...relationships that are based upon material stability and physical gratification, rather than, say, emotional awareness or spiritual growth.

...the pleasures of the flesh, or others who spice up your life, by way of compensation for what has become too predictable.

...others who are in great need of material support or physical affection or attention.

But you can consequently get caught up in...

...relationships where your partner is more in love with what you have than what you are.

...relationships where stagnation and meaninglessness begin to reign, forcing you to review your motivations, or to stray.

...being too heavily depended upon.

And yet it is through these situations that you develop emotionally and consequently improve your relationship or your prospects of one.

When you are Alone...

...or simply being made to feel alone, it will be down to one factor: 'worth'. With you there is enormous emphasis upon the worth of material stability and of relationships having permanence to them. This is all very well, but 'man does not live by bread alone', meaning that what is also needed to keep a relationship alive are more intangible qualities like mutual creative involvement (as distinct from just child-rearing), personal growth and change, or romance in terms of whatever that might mean to the other person. And so there can come a time when the absence of one or more such qualities in your relationship starts to make the relationship 'bottom heavy' in that it has all the 'flesh and objects' but no zing or emotional meaning to it. It just rumbles along, very slowly, and eventually comes to a halt. If you have not found a suitable mate at all, it will be because such overly basic values have prevented this from happening. Alternatively, you may lack a sense of self-worth and therefore not attract anyone at all. But it would still come down to assessing yourself merely by material or physical values.

4/Sun: Your Ego and Willpower

And then there is your ego, something which can be the very thing that messes up a relationship, or the prospect of one. True, we need some ego, some strong sense of self, so as not to be taken over or intimidated by someone else's! Seeing that the Sun also rules the heart, it's also what can make a relationship exciting, playful and romantic - through the generosity that is born of the heart. Yet like the powerful engine that this vital organ is, the ego needs managing and steering.

With your Sun in Virgo, you are...

The Helpful Heart or The Critical Heart

Win or Lose?

You win when you generously use your sense of order and precision, but lose when it descends into nitpicking.

You win by relating in a spirit of service and modesty, but lose if you allow this to make you feel a drudge or be filled with self-doubt.

You win by being thoughtful and attentive, but lose when you are too exacting or considerate.

You impress with...

...your aura of authenticity that acts as an example to your partner or intended of how it is possible to improve their life and be true to themselves.

...a sense of industriousness that encourages your opposite number to become more efficient at their own life's tasks, as well as showing them better techniques for doing so.

...an air of self-control or inner restraint.

But you can alienate...

...with a pat or know-it-all attitude that invites your mate or intended to leave you with only your preciousness and apparent self-righteousness for company.

...with a workaholic life-style that misses the point that true efficiency leaves time for rest and recreation.

...with an inhibited nature that smacks of being afraid of life beyond your idea of it.

You can lose the other person's respect through...

...overemphasizing your need to be seen and heard to be right - which could be wrong in itself!

...always stressing the importance of the practical at the expense of naturally expressing how one feels.

...insisting on purity and correctness of behaviour, while overlooking that rough edges and imperfections are a fact of life.

So consequently you can feel weak...

...when you have no answer, reason or solution for something - and when you have to allow your mate to help themselves.

...when your efforts appear not to be producing an obvious 'result'.

...when your partner or intended doesn't live up to being the 'perfect person' that you like to think you are, but obviously are not.

But sincerely admitting to any or all of these, commands or regains respect for you from the other person, and can dramatically improve the relationship itself or the prospect of one.

When you are Alone...

...it is hardly surprising because you are, by nature, a bit of a hermit or recluse. The reason behind such withdrawal will be a feeling that you or the other person is not good enough. When deliberate, such a retreat would be for reasons of you 'getting your act together' or to become more sure of yourself as an individual before letting anyone else get too close. In the case of involuntary isolation, it could be for the same reasons - but you just don't know it. But it is just as likely to be because you have still not removed the fly from your own ointment. This means that you continue to have, or rather believe you have, a dimension to your being that is too delicate and private to share. If so, you will be alone until you accept that this is a judgment you have made upon yourself - or others generally - in order to avoid making any real changes in yourself.

5/Mercury: How You Think and Communicate

Not a planet that has anything directly to do with love and romance, but Mercury governs what is rightly said to be a key factor in a successful relationship: communication. It also rules the way we actually perceive what is going on, all of which can mean the difference between making brilliant and intimate contact - or getting your wires horribly crossed.

With your Mercury in Virgo, you are...

The Analytical Mind or The Worrisome Mind

So you communicate and see life in terms of...

...being right or wrong, and so you take great pains to ensure that you are in possession of the facts and so consequently you can be trusted as a straight talker with an intelligent outlook.
...being accurate and precise, so you look into the details of your own and your partner's or intended's issues, separating the salient from the irrelevant, and delivering clearly your findings.

But you tend not to see...

...the wood for the trees and so you have to spend a lonely night in the forest. This means that, technically correct though you may be, your significant other is only going to hear you when they feel valued by you for more than just being able to appreciate your fine sense of logic.
...that your mate or intended sometimes just wants to hang loose, be silly or downright emotional - and not to have to just make sense.

And these are reasons why you can fail to communicate.

6/Jupiter: Your Beliefs and Standards

For a relationship to get underway there comes, sooner or later, a need for understanding. And this is down to how we evaluate things, which is in turn based on what we see as right or wrong, on our philosophy of life. Jupiter can be the greatest and best of us as it is the spirit we live in and by. But if this becomes self-righteousness or just overdoing it in some way, a relationship can become like a hot-air balloon that is deflated with the slightest prick!

With your Jupiter in Capricorn, you are...

The Pragmatic Spirit or The Self-Limiting Spirit

True Values or Hot Air?

You have the goodness to live up to material responsibilities, but should avoid this becoming a plain slog and rod to your back.

You have the morality to uphold traditional values, yet should resist this being too restrictive.

You have respect for time-worn customs and rituals, but should guard against this incurring a loss of joy or meaning.

You can inspire and gain the trust of another by...

...keeping to certain tried and true methods and patterns in one or more areas of your life, even though they may not be that obvious.

...delivering what you promise, mainly because you don't usually promise what you cannot deliver.

...enduring and making the most of times of difficulty or scarcity.

But you may exasperate by being excessively...

...dependent upon the rules and regulations laid down by someone else, be that a significant other, the state, or whoever appears to have the authority. Or, being reactionary towards any of these by way of compensation!

...cautious in what you give out, and then expecting something back in return.

...caught up in the seeking of status, and overlooking your true worth in the process.

You can promote enthusiasm through being an example of the idea...

...that life is basically a proving ground, a working situation, and that any kind of luxury must be well-deserved.

...that any spiritual belief should be based upon and around practical needs and natural laws and cycles.

...that 'by their works shall you know them'.

And so you disagree with and are put off by...

...fanciful or newfangled beliefs and ideas that have no proper roots in older or natural systems.

...giving time or space to anyone who is all talk and no walk.

!!! Point for you to watch...

...that today's radicals are tomorrow conservatives; constructive criticism is better than outright dismissal.

When you are Alone...

...it is as if you have barred yourself from rewarding and sustainable relationship by imposing upon yourself or someone else certain limiting conditions, or by allowing yourself to be subjected to them. This has something to do with the idea that 'you are only what you believe you are'. So if you believe you are not capable or deserving of having a successful relationship then that is what the case will be. From your point of view there are probably some very practical and logical reasons for being on your own. But it is the other way around - you believe you are choosing these restrictive circumstances, but the real reasons are to do with more emotional and internal qualities of your being. In short, you attract apparently limited or limiting relationships that reflect how you are limiting yourself - because you don't want to explore an area where you believe you have no control. You need to try looking for the real, emotional or psychological reasons for being alone, rather than the practical or financial ones.

7/Saturn: Your Learning Curves and Hard-Won Assets

Saturn says that if you think life isn't a learning process which necessarily includes important tests, then you are bound for failure and disappointment. This applies especially to relationships, not least all because romantic myths, books and films can give the opposite impression. But actually, on reflection, there is always some kind of test for the hero or heroine to pass in order to attain a 'happy ending'. And in passing those tests we progressively find lasting love and committed relationship, which in Saturn's book is something to do with discipline, duty, responsibility and developing self-control.

With your Saturn in Scorpio, you are... The Intimate Rock or The Intimacy Block

Tasks and Obligations

You build or need to build a relationship that is deeply trusting in order to avoid treachery, or the fear of it.

You have or need the discipline to control powerful urges, without becoming repressed.

You take, or need to take, time to detect the inner truth of the matter, thus dispelling feelings of jealousy or any other kind of emotional hell.

As part of your life's lessons you can get involved or stuck with...

...relationships which are tied together only by joint finances and possessions, or children, or power games, or legalities.

...relationships which are doomed from the start, because there is a third party, an intensely personal problem or some other obstacle to union.

...someone for fear of making the break from them.

But as a consequence you become more mature and confident through learning to...

...determine what truly matters to you, and to ruthlessly cut your losses as a testament to your sincerity regarding this.

...stop using excuses for not taking the plunge into an intimate relationship.

...be on your own, so at last you can break the taboo of getting to know who you truly are.

You commit to and are reassured by...

...someone who you feel at a very deep level that you are willing to spend your life with, someone who you would literally die or suffer death for.

...a relationship that has a genuinely fulfilling and ever-developing sexual dimension.

...someone with whom you can mutually share all of your secrets.

But you are put off or oppressed by, and therefore should be wary of...

...any signs that if push comes to shove your partner will not remain at your side.

...signs of sexual incompatibility, or sexual problems and inhibitions; but then these may very well be the actual reason for relationship, that is, to become aware of them and sort them out.

...a lack of confidentiality, or someone who is censorious or indiscreet about you.

When you are Alone...

...it is because there is a hidden, and probably sexual, side to your nature that effectively repels your partner or intended, although paradoxically that same side can be what initially created the attraction. This is not as cryptic or paradoxical as it sounds because sexual energy by its very nature both attracts and repels, and without one's looks, mind or bank balance having any bearing upon it. Sexual energy is somewhat like an emanation that issues from one like a scent. That scent can be strong or weak, pleasant or unpleasant. Often someone can be drawn to it if it is strong only to find later that it is not pleasant, in the sense that there is an undertone that says 'stay away, I am not really sexually available' - for whatever reason. But it is the word 'sexually' that needs defining, for it has a specific meaning here. It is saying that you are not ready or able to get close enough to another or the other person on a psychological level - that is, there is something deep in your soul that needs healing, possibly purging. Sexual relationships may well actually do this, but if your 'scent' inhibits this, then you may need to seek professional help.

8/Ascendant and Descendant: How What You Put Out Equals What You Get Back

Here is the great secret of successful relationship. But like all great secrets it takes some understanding, so don't feel you have to be up to taking it on board - yet. This is where relating gets decidedly psychological, focussing as it does upon things like projection and shadows. If and when you can understand some or all of the dynamics of your Ascendant or Rising Sign, and your Descendant or Setting Sign, then you will truly be on your way to discovering what relationship is really all about!

With Capricorn Rising and Cancer Setting

You come across as...

Worldly One or Wet Blanket.

So the type you attract is...

Carer or Needy One.

How You Interact with who you attract

You approach virtually everything and everyone in a tactical, businesslike manner; you certainly don't lead with your feelings. You generate an aura of material, political awareness and if anything needs organizing you will be the first to offer - or rather start doing so without even being asked. Life to you is something to be managed and controlled, so when it comes to emotionally relating or social interplay you are not as a rule one to let rip and let your hair down. Dependability and respectability are what you have on offer, not passion and drama. However, this is not to say that you have no sense of fun because there is devilish side to you that pops out every so often, but even that would have a certain limit placed upon it - possibly by someone else. A significant other cannot help but respond to all this serious, grown-up stuff in a commensurately emotional, childlike and needy fashion. Either that, or you are not about to get much response at all other than an equally restrained display. Hopefully then, your partner or intended will get you to melt and loosen up a bit, and appreciate that life can be a soulful adventure and not a matter of fact affair where you are inclined to squash your mate at one sign too many of playful romanticism or unscripted unworldliness. This would be a mistake because you need their caring, sympathetic and comparatively immature and childlike input to get past your tough hide of an exterior.

Your Shadow is: Naivety

You live in dread of losing control, of failing to keep what's happening on the inside becoming visible on the outside. You feel that to appear unworldly, needful or naive would amount to some kind of self-demolition. And because you are petrified of letting this child inside of you show, what you regard as that guileless part of you becomes increasingly like a time-bomb of a baby that one day is going to bawl the house down. This means that if you do not confess to having that naive and innocent part to you, the part which a partner, real or prospective, actually loves rather than just depends upon, a time will come when it causes you to make the very gaffe that destroys the lifestyle and structure you have so painstakingly built up. In other words, you need to admit to having needs.

Your Style of Relationship

A home-from-home, traditional type of relationship where you and your mate each know their respective roles, duties and boundaries. Family values and sentimentality should be the life blood of your relationship. For you, a partnership may well be a business relationship as well. If any of this seems or feels claustrophobic to you, or just doesn't seem to happen in this day and age, then you must be still on some wide arc of self-discovery that will lead back to this basic set-up - one day, soon or far off.

When you are Alone...

...it is because you have yet to realize that relationships are born and maintained in the unconscious mind, that very pool of emotions and longings which you work so hard to keep under control. You are like a dam that holds all the water in to generate power for material use but there is no natural flow which would bring about fertility and growth - the nuts and bolts of relationship. You needs to open the sluices, release your emotions, relinquish control, and surrender your fears! Then a mate will appear or reappear.

Postscript

It is truly hoped that this special interpretation of your unique Birth Chart - The Individual: How to Attract a Mate and Relate - has been helpful, enlightening and encouraging - and that it leads you to a successful relationship. Human relating is possibly the greatest art of life, and to help you become better versed in it the following reports are also recommended:

SUccessful RELationship 2- The Interaction: The Chemistry Between You. This describes how two people actually experience one another on a number of levels. The 'hot' and the 'cold' areas; the irresistible attractions and the unfortunate differences. It also shows you how to negotiate those difficult areas and maximize those positive ones.

SUccessful RELationship 3- The Relationship: One & One Makes Three. This tells you how when one individual has been involved long enough with another for it to be called a relationship, then it is as if the two people have created a third entity: the relationship itself. A good way of understanding this is to see a relationship, this third entity, as a child that the couple have produced. As such it will have a strong effect upon both people, individually and as a partnership. In fact, in the same way that an actual child makes the two people that created it into parents, the relationship makes them into partners, rather than just two separate individuals. So knowing and understanding this 'child' that two people have created goes a long way towards making it a happy and successful relationship.

With Best Wishes

Lyn.
